An Introduction to Eventing!

An event involves three distinct phases or tests, with varying degrees of difficulty, depending on the level the competitor signs up for. Taken as a whole, these three phases test the ability, versatility, and preparation of the horse and rider, hence one of the names for the sport: horse trial. Penalty points are recorded for the three tests. In eventing the horse and rider combination with the lowest score wins.

Dressage is the first test and involves a series of prescribed classical movements performed on the flat in an enclosed arena of either, 20 meters by 40 meters or 20 meters by 60 meters. The judge looks for a supple, balanced, obedient and lively ride. As the levels go up, and the riders will be asked to do more difficult movements that match their level of ability. The test is memorized and the riders are not allowed to be coached during their test. Cross Country is the second test of the horse trial, and is the heart of the sport. Horse and rider gallop over natural terrain, jumping a variety of fixed obstacles along the way. The riders inspect the course prior to riding. However, the horses are seeing the fences for the first time when the test begins, demanding the highest level of trust between horse and rider. Stadium jumping is the third and last test done during the course of the horse trial. Horse and rider negotiate a course made of brightly colored obstacles in an enclosed arena. This last test checks obedience and suppleness as well as the horse's stamina and fitness after the rigors of the cross-country phase. The stadium jumping test is followed by an awards ceremony. Scoring is based on penalty points accumulated through 3 phases, and lowest total score wins (like golf).

Eventing offer levels suitable to the skills of all competitors, from the recreational rider to the expert with Olympic goals in sight. Over 75% of USEA members compete at beginner novice, novice, and training levels. These levels are straightforward, moderate, and designed for the horse and rider team to have a very positive experience. At the preliminary level the challenge broadens. From the intricate movements in the dressage test, to the combinations of obstacles and much faster speeds in cross country and stadium jumping phases, the horse and rider teams must work very hard to achieve success at the preliminary or higher levels. Local horse trials often also offer the introductory level, for inexperienced riders and very young horses just getting started.

Starter: Starter level is designed to be a fun and easy experience for horse or rider new to the sport. The dressage test is very basic and asks for a simple pattern consisting of walk, trot, and canter. The stadium course is cross rails and low verticals of no more than 2'0" in height. Cross country is straight forward and focuses more on the terrain versus the amount of obstacles and is not times to encourage developing control versus speed. The maximum height of the cross country and stadium obstacles is 2'0". The cross-country course is not timed, to encourage developing control before adding speed. Obstacles are logs and smaller versions of those that challenge the beginner novice division. Young riders may be accompanied by a coach.

Beginner Novice: Beginner novice level is designed to encourage the green horse or rider in the sport. The dressage test is very basic, cross country is straight forward and does not include combinations, bullfinches, or banks, and water is optional. The length of the course is shortened and the speed run is between 300 and 350 meters per minute. The maximum height of the cross country and stadium obstacles is 2'7".

Novice: Novice is a very straightforward level, with a dressage test that includes walk, trot and canter and some demonstration of suppleness. The cross-country test is inviting, with a touch more challenge done at a speed of 350 to 400 meters per minute. Obstacles max out at 2'11", and may include banks, water, ditches, and combinations. This level is designed to give the horse and rider a positive experience.

A Combined Test has two phases: Dressage and Stadium Jumping - a nice way for those with experience only in the hunter/jumper ring or with dressage to expand their skills and have even more fun!
