*Detailed Options

Corequisite Options

Two semesters of college-level foreign language study

Elective Options

Regional Focus Requirement: students must take three courses focused on a particular region of the world; one of the three may be a foreign language course. These may include courses used as major electives and thus count toward the required 21 elective credits. Courses may include ones not entirely focused on a particular region, but in which a student does a significant project or paper on the region in question. Students are also encouraged to fulfill their regional focus requirement by means of coursework taken during a semester studying abroad. See Dean of Religion, Humanities, and Global Studies for more information and for approval.*
